The purpose of the Austin History Center is to provide customers with information about the history and current events of Austin and Travis County by collecting, organizing, and preserving research materials and assisting in their use.

INTRODUCTION

The collections of the Austin History Center contain valuable materials about Austin's African American communities, although there is much that remains to be documented. The materials in this bibliography are arranged by collection unit of the Austin History Center. Within each collection unit, items are arranged in shelf-list order.

This bibliography is one in a series of updates of the original 1979 bibliography. It reflects the addition of materials to the Austin History Center based on the recommendations and donations of many generous individuals and support groups. The Austin History Center card catalog supplements the online computer catalog by providing analytical entries to information in periodicals and other materials in addition to listing collection holdings by author, title, and subject. These entries, although indexing ended in the 1990s, lead to specific articles and other information in sources that would otherwise be time-consuming to find and could be easily overlooked.

Significant gaps still remain in the recorded history of African Americans in Travis County. Please refer to the final section of this bibliography, "Underdocumented Areas of Interest," for a detailed listing of topics and people about which additional material is still needed.

A note about description of resources in this guide:

The Austin History Center is committed to using what Dominique Luster refers to as "conscious language," when describing people and organizations. Conscious language = kind language + compassionate language + mindful language + empowering language + respectful language + inclusive language. The AHC uses the following resource to guide description: Archives for Black Lives in Philadelphia: Anti-Racist Description Resources. Please contact us about any concerns when reviewing the description of AHC resources.
